FRII ADDS TWO KEY PLAYERS IN NEW INTERNAL STRUCTURE

FORT COLLINS, CO—FRII hired two managers last month as part of the new internal reorganization and departmental expansion. Scot Ganshert has been named Engineering Manager and Kathe Seeby is the new Sales Manager.

Ganshert comes to FRII with 14 years of Technology Management experience and a BBA in Management Information Systems from the University of Alaska Anchorage. Most recently Ganshert was a manager at Alaska's largest ISP.

Seeby brings 20 years of Sales and Sales Management experience selling long-term contracted services with Web Service Company, Inc.. Seeby managed sales and administration functions in Web's South and Southeast regions encompassing 10 branches in 7 states.

"FRII is ready to take things to the next level," says VP of Sales & Business Development, Shawna Killen. "We brought Scot and Kathe on board for their fresh outside perspectives and because of their broad experience. We will rely on them to aid in finding quality talent, improving our processes and managing our day-to-day business, allowing our Executive Team to focus on future strategies and long-term goals," adds Killen.

Ganshert and Seeby are part of an ongoing effort by FRII to propel the growth and successes of the past 13 years in new and targeted markets. "I am excited to be at FRII and am looking forward to working with this very talented engineering staff," says Ganshert.

And Seeby adds, "I came to FRII with many years of experience overseeing and growing a team of sales champions. From where I sit it's a marriage made in heaven."

FRII currently has plans to grow the sales team by 3-5 key individuals before the end of 2008. Seeby will be instrumental in recruiting and managing the new talent. Ganshert will be responsible for overseeing the engineering team that maintains FRII's extensive network and supports the sales efforts.
